More winter flights to Britain in new victory for low season tourism

Palma.—Irish budget airline Ryanair announced yesterday that they would be linking Palma with Manchester three times a week during the winter months in a fresh victory in the battle for more low season flights. The Irish airline are already linking Palma with Edinburgh during the winter months which was widely welcomed because until then there were no direct flights to Scotland during the winter period. Extra flights should mean more winter tourists for Majorca. There has been a gradual increase in the number of low season flights between Britain and Majorca over recent months.

ESRA flower show a big success
