THE BIG DROP

● Night-time temperatures fall by 10 degrees Centigrade as the hot spell comes to an end.

THE night-time temperature fell by 10 degrees in the early hours of Wednesday morning and some parts of the island registered temperatures of just eight degrees as the warm weather period finally came to end. The Met Office says that the unsettled weather will continue this week and lower temperatures can be expected. The sudden drop in temperatures caught many by surprise after the long hot summer. But it is not the low temperatures which are causing concern...it is the lack of rain.

ITALIAN POLICE WARNING

Cashing in on quake solidarity

● Italian police have warned the public of fraudsters attempting to cash in on an outpouring of sympathy over a deadly earthquake after the discovery of a bogus charity claiming to raise funds for victims of last month's disaster.

Almost 300 people were killed and thousands left homeless by a powerful tremor that hit central Italy on 24 Aug., prompting an international wave of solidarity.

But not all charitable efforts appeared to be genuine, police said, reporting that detectives had identified a web page set up by a purported charity to sell T-shirts depicting the devastated centre of Amatrice, one of the quake-hit towns.
