RAJOY RETURNS TO POWER

GOOD BUT NOT GREAT

CALVIA shopkeepers and bar and restaurant owners have poured cold water on reports of a record holiday season in the municipality which is famous for its resorts of Magalluf, Palmanova and Santa Ponsa. Their association (Acotur) said yesterday that members had been forced to introduce special offers and sales to entice buyers. Local hoteliers had claimed that the summer season was one of the best ever. But not for all, according to Acotur. Once again all inclusive holidays continue to hit the bar and restaurant trade with many small businesses unable to compete. Acotur went on to say that they also faced a “cold winter” with almost 90 percent of hotels in the Calvia area closing for the winter. “I think it is a case of much ado about nothing,” said the president of Acotur, Jose Tirado, when asked about the so-called record season and poor low season. He doubts that the return of Spanish pensioners on state-funded holidays over the winter months will improve the situation.

Donald Trump looking for boost from Hillary Clinton's new email problem

Washington.— U.S. Republican presidential nominee Donald Trump shifted quickly yesterday to take advantage of a new twist in Democrat Hillary Clinton's long-running email saga, seeking a much-needed boost in the campaign's waning days.

The FBI's disclosure that it is investigating more emails as part of a probe into Clinton's use of a private email server gave fresh energy to Trump.

At rallies in New Hampshire, Maine and Iowa, Trump hit hard on his message that Clinton is a corrupt leader who cannot be trusted and he pulled back a bit on his charge that the political system is rigged against him.

Trump called the new development part of “the biggest political scandal since Watergate,” the 1970s scandal that forced the resignation of Republican president Richard Nixon. Trump abruptly changed his tune after repeatedly attacking FBI Director James Comey in the last three months for not indicting Clinton for her handling of classified information while U.S. secretary of state from 2009 to 2013. “As you know, I've had plenty of words about the FBI lately, but I give them great credit for having the courage to right this horrible wrong. Justice will prevail,” Trump said in Cedar Rapids, Iowa. See Inside
