Spain hopes to reach deal with Britain over Gibraltar

London.— Spain hopes to reach a framework deal with Britain by October on the status of Gibraltar after Britain's exit from the European Union, Spanish Prime Minister Pedro Sanchez said yesterday.

Spain also needed a transitional period alongside Britain to reach agreements on matters relating to environmental, fiscal and tobacco trading laws on the British territory, he said.

"We need to have an agreement on Gibraltar by October," he told reporters at an EU summit in the Austrian city of Salzburg.

Gibraltar, which lies on the southern coast of Spain, will leave the EU along with the United Kingdom on 29 March next year. It is not part of the EU customs union but businesses fear regulation of the border could become more rigid following Brexit in March next year.

This could also have detrimental effects for the thriving economy of the tiny territory, which relies on workers crossing the border from Spain.

Bilateral talks between London and Madrid on Gibraltar have been underway since the beginning of the year, with civil servants holding six meetings so far in both countries.

● "It's not acceptable to simply reject the other side's proposals without a detailed explanation and counter proposals. So we now need to hear from the EU what the real issues are, what their alternative is, so that we can discuss them. Until we do, we cannot make progress." See Report Inside Today
