Sacking of woman who used facebook 260 times upheld by Palma court

Palma.—A Palma court has upheld the case of a woman who was sacked for going into her facebook page 260 times during work-hours at her office in Palma over a short period. The woman took legal action against her employers after she was dismissed for using her facebook account while she was at work. But the Palma High Court sided with her employers and the case was dismissed.

Mixed views over introduction of new TIE cards

A British woman, who had an appointment to collect her new TIE residence card in Palma, was turned away this morning with officials saying “that the card hadn’t arrived yet...” She was asked by police at the Foreigner’s Department to book another appointment at a later date because of some distribution problems.

However, another Bulletin reader said that she had collected her card on time and with few problems last week. “There was a long queue and the policeman told us that the card was not ready yet and that we should return at a later date...” The roll-out of the TIE card had been largely problem free but it now appears that there are some teething problems. The TIE card is being introduced for British citizens to replace the “green residence certificate” after Britain left the European Union.

An even earlier curfew

● The Balearic government spokesperson, Pilar Costa, said yesterday that the government will support the proposal to bring forward the current curfew from 10pm to 8pm. See Page Three.

Protest in London as Spain waits on shellfish

MORE than 20 shellfish trucks parked on roads near the British parliament and Prime Minister Boris Johnson’s Downing Street residence yesterday to protest against post-Brexit bureaucracy that has throttled exports to the European Union, especially Spain. Many fishermen have been unable to export to the EU since catch certificates, health checks and customs declarations were introduced at the start of this year, delaying their deliveries and prompting European buyers to reject them.

Trucks with slogans such as “Brexit carnage” and “incompetent government destroying shellfish industry” parked metres from Johnson’s 10 Downing Street office in central London. Police were asking the lorry drivers for details.
