SPAIN WINS TWO GOLDS IN TOKYO AS TEAM GB'S MEDAL RUSH CONTINUES

Spain's Sandra Sanchez, known as the "queen of kata", won karate's maiden gold medal yesterday, defeating perennial rival and hometown favourite Kiyu Shimizu in the sport's historic debut at the Olympic Games in Tokyo. The win adds to a long and successful run for the 39-year-old Spaniard, whose 36-medal haul at the sport's top-billed Karate 1 Premier League has already earned her a place in the Guinness Book of World Records. "It's crazy. I'm feeling so many things at once. I'm happy but I want to cry," said Sanchez, who also celebrated her five-year wedding anniversary with her husband-coach Jesus del Moral yesterday.

"I think I need more time to believe that this is real." Spain's Alberto Gines Lopez also won the first Olympic gold medal in climbing yesterday.

POLICE RULE OUT ACTIVE ISLAMIC TERRORIST CELL IN MAJORCA

● An Algerian national, suspected of financing terrorism, was arrested on July 31 in Arenal. He was staying at a hotel in the Lluçmajor part of Arenal.

Coordination between Spanish intelligence, the Guardia Civil, Interpol and Algerian authorities is said to have established that he is the head of a criminal human trafficking organisation and that he has been involved with the movement of combatants from Algeria, Morocco and Tunisia to areas controlled by jihadist factions in Libya, groups that he is believed to have been funding with benefits derived from human trafficking. This criminal organisation is also believed to be behind the movement of terrorist fighters from Algeria to Spain; they have been detained. The Guardia Civil say that he has been highly mobile and that he has documentation for various countries. The passport used for entering Spain was false. His reasons for being in Spain are being investigated, although police sources suggest that his presence in Majorca is "totally circumstantial" and reject the possibility that there is any Islamic terrorist cell on the island.
