No end in sight for Canary Islands volcano

Madrid.— There is no immediate end in sight to the volcanic eruption that has caused chaos on the Spanish isle of La Palma since it began about a month ago, the president of the Canary Islands said.

There were 42 seismic tremors on the island on Sunday, the largest of which measured 4.3, according to the Spanish National Geographical Institute.

“There are no signs that an end of the eruption is imminent even though this is the greatest desire of everyone,” President Angel Víctor Torres said at a Socialist party conference in Valencia, citing the view of scientists.

Streams of lava have laid waste to more than 742 hectares (1,833 acres) of land and destroyed almost 2,000 buildings on La Palma since the volcano started erupting on Sept. 19.

REACH FOR THE SKY

Palma.—The Palma fire brigade have taken delivery of a new fire truck which has a 32 metre extending ladder which can carry three people.

The city council said yesterday that it would allow the fire brigade to reach greater levels and would be a major addition for the city’s fire fighters.

The Mayor of Palma, Jose Hila, attended the unveiling ceremony yesterday just in front of Palma Cathedral.

The vehicle and ladder have cost in excess of 850,000 euros.

The council said that it was all part of their plan to upgrade the equipment of local firefighters.
